Description:

Not only do we have different types of adult learners, i.e. the auditory, kinesthetic and visual learner but we must now take into consideration the generation the learners are born into. There are Traditionalists, Baby Boomers, Generation X, and Millennial (genY) learners. Today one half of the nation's workforce is comprised of Generation X and Millennial (genY) learners. Identifying characteristics of these learners will help us work more effectively with our colleagues and our clients. This presentation will demonstrate how this information is being used in developing web-based training.

Objectives: As a result of having attended this WebEx presentation, participants will be able to:

1. Describe unique learning characteristics associated with different generations.
2. Describe how information on generational learning can be applied to workplace and when working with clients.
3. Describe how this information is being applied through a web-based training on program planning and evaluation.

To obtain a certificate of continuing education, you must submit a completed evaluation form.
