What is our Native Mental Health Disparity?

- Federal policy of “legalized discrimination.” Genocide.
- Historical Trauma - cumulative emotional and psychological wounding across generations.
- Historical Trauma Response - a collection of features in reaction to this trauma.
- Poverty, Suicide, Substance Abuse, Violence, Access to cultural-based Mental Health care.
- County & Tribal relationships from a “Native” perspective.
- Grassroots “bottom to top” approach: PEI implementation, funding autonomy, community-participatory evaluation.

Native Vision

The goal of Native Vision is to develop a plan to improve mental health and well-being for Native Americans across California. This two-year project will bring forward community-defined solutions and recommendations across the diverse regions of tribal, rural and urban Native American populations in California. Native Vision is a new statewide project facilitated through the Native American Health Center in Oakland, California. The project is funded by the California Department of Mental Health.

Native Vision has an 8 member Strategic Planning Workgroup to guide the project "in a good way" and who represent the project on a statewide level. The workgroup is comprised of Native behavioral health professionals from across the state of California. They are: Tony Cervantes (Native American Center for Excellence), Dan Dickerson (University of California Los Angeles), Michael Duran (Indian Health Center of Santa Clara Valley), Carrie Johnson (United American Indian Involvement), Janet King (Native American Health Center), Tene Kremling (Humboldt State University), Art Martinez (Shingle Springs Tribal Health Program), and Martin Martinez (Redwood Valley Little River Band of Pomo Indians).

- Mental Health PEI for Native communities are varied and fluid – “think outside the box.”
- There are many differences between and within Native communities.
- Western practices usually do not work (adaptability).
- Native American practices usually do work.
- Community members voiced the need for mental health services that are “culturally” appropriate and based.
