Advancements in Diabetes Recorded Sessions

Title: Integrating Historic Food Ways into Current Healthcare Practices

Presenters: Kibbe Conti, MS, RD, CDE
IHS Northern Plains Dietitian, Rapid City, SD

Type of Activity: Enduring Event (Recorded Webinar)

Release Date: July 31, 2018

Expiration Date: March 12, 2021

Estimated Time to Complete Activity: 60 minutes

Live Session Originally Presented on: March 13, 2018

Target Audience: Indian Health Service, Tribal and Urban (ITU) health care providers in clinical and community health settings.

Description:

Although traditional food ways have a long history of importance and use in health maintenance and disease prevention and treatment in AI/AN communities, they are often underestimated as a part of health services. This session will provide an overview of the potential contributions of the Indigenous diet to health, wellness, and people-centered health care. Discussion of appropriate integration of traditional food ways into health care and education will be provided, including specific examples and tools for diabetes care and self-management education.

Training Objectives and Outcomes:

As a result of completing this training, participants will be able to:

1. Describe the contribution of Indigenous concepts in patient education in supporting motivation for patient change.
2. Provide diabetes education in a way that encourages use of traditional food ways.
3. Identify aspects of traditional Native American lifestyles that may contribute to improved health and well-being.
4. Identify one change you can make in your clinical or public health practice that may help encourage or restore healthy aspects of traditional lifestyles.
